PREFACE

In preparing this little volume I have endeavored with utmost fidelity to avoid errors in names and dates. Handwriting is often difficult to decipher. Various members of the family have not always agreed upon essential facts. I have travelled hundreds of miles, examined voluminous records, and spent no end of time and money. That I have escaped errors and written an infallible history is too much to hope.

This much, however, has been accomplished: Written records long buried have been unearthed. Oral recollections that must shortly perish with the passing of older members of the family are now in tangible form. To have assembled together this hitherto unwritten history is a satisfaction in itself.

But there is a deeper reason for the performance of this task. I do it as a tribute to the memory of my dear and sainted mother, Frances Williams Archer. The little hamlet of Great Pond, Plantation No. 33, was her home all her days. Here she lived and loved and suffered and died. The people whose family lines I have traced were her people, blood of her blood. Her ashes rest in the little cemetery with five of her children around her.

To her town, to her people, and to her memory this book is lovingly dedicated.

ANCESTORS AND DESCENDANTS OF JOSHUA WILLIAMS

CHAPTER I

A STORY OF STURDY NEW ENGLAND

The story of my great-great-grandfather, Joshua Williams, has never before been written. He lived in the heroic age of the American Revolution and played his part humbly, courageously and manfully. He was a soldier and bled for his country. He was a pioneer and endured hardship and privation. He was of the common people and not even a tombstone was reared over his grave when he was laid away ninety-four years ago in a family burying ground in the midst of his mowing field.

The descendants of Joshua Williams are scattered. The wilderness hamlet that he founded — Plantation No. 33, also known as Great Pond — is fading into decay. His very name was becoming legendary and the story of his life had passed out of human recollection even when the author was a child. None of his descendants could name Joshua's birthplace nor indicate the family from which he sprung.

Through months of research only, and the following of clues that too often ended nowhere, has the author been able to trace the authentic story of this man, of his ancestors and his descendants — in short, to describe a cross section of New England from the "Landing of the Pilgrims" to the present day.

The author was born in the wilderness hamlet of Joshua Williams. That the old patriarch was a Revolutionary soldier and came from China, Maine, was the sum total of family tradition. With these slender clues he set forth to search the musty records only to find that there were no records of China, Maine, that so much as mentioned his ancestor.

The Revolutionary records were at first equally discouraging. Joshua's name was not contained in the list of "Soldiers and Sailors of the Revolution." That he received a pension, however, indicated that the War Department had some record of the old hero. The pension files yielded meagre information, but startling information at that. Joshua's residence at the time of enlistment was given as Middleborough, Mass.

Here, again, was a mystery. The town records and histories of Middleborough were silent. Not a trace of Joshua could be found. Williams families there were in adjoining towns and even in Mid-dleborough itself. There were Joshuas in Taunton in Revolutionary days.

There was one Joshua in Taunton, the son of John Williams, duly authenticated a "Mayflower" descendant. The family record stated that this Joshua married Bethiah Clark of Abington, lived in Taunton for a time and then went to Maine.

It was a thrilling moment when the Abington records disclosed that Joshua Williams in his marriage intentions of April, 1771, stated that he lived in Middleborough. From that moment the author was sure that he had found his missing ancestors, and traced his line to the "Mayflower." But the secretary of the Mayflower Society was skeptical. Proof, not conjecture, was his watchword. To place the matter beyond future contradiction the author filed a formal application for membership in the Society of Mayflower Descendants. Thus only could official verification be secured. Months were required to prove that the Joshua of Taunton and Middleborough was the same Joshua whose bones now repose in an unmarked grave in Plantation No. 33, Hancock County, Maine.

But proof was secured. The claim was allowed. The author's membership card, general society No. 9050, Massachusetts society No. 3064, is also a vindication of the apparently wild story of a half-demented old lady, Frances Williams Lord, that her grandfather, Joshua Williams, was himself a descendant of that noble company of the Pilgrim Fathers.

It established another even more notable thing, — that every native of the wilderness hamlet of the author's childhood — one hundred persons in all — was a descendant of the "Mayflower," and not a soul of them, save the old lady mentioned, was aware of the fact. All were descendants of Joshua Williams. Cut off from the outside world, in the midst of a trackless wilderness, this little community had existed for a hundred years, preserving the very customs, the folk songs and ring plays of Old England, as well as the blue laws of colonial New England, generations after the rest of Yankeeland had laid them aside.

It is well, therefore, that this story be preserved. The little settlement is now all but deserted. The forest is closing in upon its fields and pastures. Its tenantless houses speak of sturdy manhood and womanhood now sleeping in the hilltop cemetery. They speak of noisy school children now grown up and scattered far and wide.

Truly a Deserted Village — this wilderness hamlet of Joshua Williams.

CHAPTER II

ANCESTORS OF JOSHUA WILLIAMS

1. Thomas Rogers was the first American ancestor of Joshua Williams. He was one of that immortal company that gave to this Nation its first great lesson in democracy, — the "Mayflower" Compact. In Provincetown Harbor, on November 21, 1620, in the dim cabin of the "Mayflower," he participated in signing our first charter of liberty.

He was a Pilgrim Father indeed, for he brought with him to America his oldest son Joseph, then a mere lad, leaving other children, presumably of more tender years, in England. We may well imagine the care that the father lavished on his child amid the rigors of that terrible first winter of pestilence and privation at Plymouth.

All the world is familiar with the story of that winter and how, in Governor Bradford's words:

So as ther dyed some times 2 or 3 of a day, in the aforesaid time; that of 100 & odd persons, scarce 50 remained. and of these in ye time of most distress ther was but 6 or 7 sound persons, who to their great commendations be it spoken, spared no pains, night nor day, but with abundance of toyle and hazard of their owne health, fetched them woode, made them fires, drest them meat, made their beads, washed their loathsome cloaths, cloathed & uncloathed them; in a word, did all ye homely & necessarie offices for them wch dainty & quesiie stomachs cannot endure to hear named; and all this willingly and cheerfully, without any grudging in ye least, shewing herein their true love unto their friends & brethren

Governor Bradford then commends Elder Brewster and Myles Standish as having been two of seven who performed these services and escaped infection.

And what I have said of these, I may say of many others who dyed in this generall vissitation, & others yet living, that whilst they had health, yea, or any strength continuing, they were not wanting to any that had need of them. And I doute not but their recompense is with ye Lord.¹

In the appendix to his history,² written some thirty years after the settlement of Plymouth, Governor Bradford recounts the fate of each passenger of the "Mayflower." He writes thus concerning Thomas Rogers:

Thomas Rogers dyed in the first sicknes, but his sone Joseph is still living. and is married, and hath 6 children. The rest of Thomas Rogers (children) came over, & are married, & have many children.

Assuredly Thomas Rogers may be termed a martyr to the cause of religious liberty, one of those plain and unpretentious heroes who form the bulwark of every great cause.

Joseph Rogers, the youth who survived his father in the great pestilence, was not the ancestor of Joshua Williams. The line descends through

2. John Rogers, who was born in England and came to America after his father's death. He is called "John Rogers of Duxbury" in distinction from a contemporary "John Rogers of Marshfield." The Mayflower Society recognize John of Duxbury as the son of Thomas of the "Mayflower."³

John Rogers married, April 16, 1639, Ann Churchman,⁴ daughter of Hugh Churchman, who was one of the early settlers of Lynn.⁵ John was later one of the incorporators of Little Compton, R. I.

3. Anna Rogers, the daughter of John Rogers, married John Tisdale, Jr., of Taunton, November 23, 1664.⁶ Tisdale was a son of John and Susan (Walker) Tisdale, one of the twenty-six original proprietors of Freetown. Tisdale died in December, 1677, and his widow made two other matrimonial ventures. Her second husband was Thomas Terry, and her third Samuel Williams.⁷

By her first husband Anna gave birth to several children.⁸ Her eldest daughter

4. Abigail Tisdale married William Makepeace, December 2, 1685.⁹ Their eldest child

5. Abigail Makepeace was born November 25, 1686.¹⁰ She married Immanuel (also spelled Emanuell) Williams, one of the early settlers of Taunton. The date of this marriage is uncertain, but it probably occurred at about the time of the execution of a deed by William Makepeace to his son-in-law:

Immanuel Williams of Taunton, of fifty acres &c to be the portion of Immanuel and his wife Abigail, the daughter of the said William Makepeace.

This conveyance was dated June 10, 1703.¹¹

Abigail died about 1724, but her husband Immanuel died five years before her death.¹² The inventory of the estate of "Emanuel Williams" was taken November 2, 1719. "Abigell" Williams was appointed administratrix, with William Makepeace and John Mason as sureties on her bond. The dwelling house and homestead was listed at £580.¹² After Abigail's death her father was appointed administrator de bonis non.

The settlement of Immanuel's estate shows that six children were left by Immanuel and Abigail: John, Gershom, Simeon, Anne, Lydia and Phœbe.

6. John Williams, the eldest son of Immanuel, was born about 1704. He lived in Taunton all his life. He married Elizabeth Caswell, by whom he had ten children.

The family record ¹³ contains the following:

CHILDREN, BORN IN TAUNTON

1. John Jr., born about 1728; married Rhoda Crowell of Chatham, Mass.
2. Elijah, married Ruth ——. It is thought that he moved to Hardwick, Mass.
3. Lemuel, married Sibyl Tisdale, March 15, 1764. He died in Raynham, Mass.
4. Jacob, married March 29, 1765, Sarah Deane; resided in Taunton, Middleborough and Williamsburg.
5. George, married 1765, Keziah Atwood; resided for a time in Middleborough.
6. Joshua, married 1777,¹⁴ Bethiah Clark of Abington; resided for a time in Taunton; moved to Maine.
7. Silas, moved to Maine and married there.
8. Abigail, married January 4, 1759, Joshua Shaw; died April 8, 1801.
9. Elizabeth, married June 4, 1859, Jabez Eaton; resided in Middleborough.
10. Rachel, married Feb. 4, 1773, Jonathan French; resided in Berkeley; died in 1788.

John Williams died in 1780. His will bore the date of October 31, 1765, and was probated September 15, 1780.¹⁵

CHAPTER III

JOSHUA WILLIAMS HIMSELF

Joshua Williams, seventh generation from "Mayflower," was born in Taunton, Mass., the son of John and Elizabeth (Caswell) Williams.¹ The exact date of his birth is uncertain, but when he applied for a pension April 20, 1818, he stated that he was seventy-one years old. This would indicate that he was born in the year 1747.

He was one of ten children, but there are no birth dates in the family records. It seems, also, to have been the custom in colonial records to list the sons first. Daughters of whatever age came at the end of the list. The first daughter of the family married in January, 1759. The first recorded marriage of any of the sons was that of Lemuel, the third son, March 15, 1764, when Joshua apparently was seventeen. Allowing for the usual two years between children of colonial families, this would place Lemuel at twenty-one.

Another fact bearing upon the birth date of Joshua is contained in the Abington Vital Records, showing that Bethiah Clark, whom Joshua later married, was born October 25, 1751.² This would indicate that the groom was somewhat over four years older than the bride, thus conforming to the usual tendency of mating humanity.

But there is another significant date that further confirms the date previously indicated as the year of Joshua's birth. He was married May 30, 1771,³ to Bethiah Clark, which would make him twenty-four, and the bride herself between nineteen and twenty.

Joshua displayed in many ways that independence of spirit so characteristic of his family of pioneers. Although his father, John Williams, was one of the most substantial citizens of Taunton, nevertheless, Joshua, even before his marriage, established a residence in the adjoining town of Middleborough. This is evidenced by a deed⁴ executed January 21, 1771, and signed by "Joshua Williams of Middleboro and Silas Williams of Taunton." By this deed they conveyed nine acres of land in Taunton to their older brother Lemuel Williams for a consideration of £29.

It has already been observed that in the marriage record of May 30, 1771, Joshua claimed residence in Middleborough. It is significant, also, and indicative of the inherent temperament of the young man, that he should choose Bridgewater as the place of marriage.

² "Bethia Clark d of Benjamin & Bethia, Oct. 25, 1751." Abington Births, p. 47, New England Historical Society, 1912, Abington, Mass., vol. I.

³ Quite obviously the date given in the Williams family record as 1777 (New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. 57, p. 76) is erroneous. Middleborough Records (old records, Book 2, p. 187) show that he was published in the following way: "Joshua Williams of Middleborough and Bethiah Clark of Abington February 23, 1771."

The Abington Records (Abington Marriages, p. 49, New England Historical Society, 1912, Abington, Mass., vol. II) give the following: "Bethia Clark (int. Bethiah Clarke) and Joshua Williams of Middleboro (int. Middleboro) May 30, 1770 (sic) (Int. Feb. 22, 1771) in Bridgewater."

The discrepancy in dates is dispelled by consulting the Bridgewater Vital Records, in which the date of the marriage is fixed as of May 30, 1771.

⁴ Bristol County Deeds, vol. 62, p. 565.

It would be natural to expect the ceremony to occur at the home of the bride's parents in Abington, or at the home of John Williams in Taunton, or at Joshua's own home in Middleborough. Why did he choose Bridgewater as the scene of his nuptials? The answer is doubtless less difficult than the later one of why in 1784 he exchanged a life of comparative affluence in Taunton for the rigors of pioneer life in the then wilderness of Maine.

As a Revolutionary Soldier

The next written record of Joshua Williams in point of time is contained in the Pension Office in Washington, showing that in January, 1776, Joshua enlisted in the Patriot Army and served for one year under a Captain Allen, in the regiment of a Colonel Ward.

The fact that the pension claim was allowed is sufficient evidence of this service, but, owing to the fact that many military records of the War for Independence were lost, there is no printed record of Joshua's service. He was not in any of the local militia companies, but evidently enlisted in the continental army. His pension application states that he participated in the Long Island campaign, which, of course, included the battle of Long Island and the great strategic retreat into New Jersey and Delaware.

A firmly grounded family tradition exists that he participated in the battle of Bunker Hill and was there seriously wounded by a musket ball through the hips. In my childhood I heard this story from my grandmother and from my great-aunt, Frances K. Lord, both of whom were grand-daughters of the old soldier. "Aunt Fanny," in fact, was a girl of eight or ten years when her grandfather died, and the old man during his last years lived in the household of his son Simeon, the father of the two women.

There was a Colonel Artemus Ward whose troops participated in the battle of Bunker Hill. There was also a Colonel Jonathan Ward who commanded the Twenty-first Regiment of Infantry in the battle of Long Island.

It appears from the Pension Records that Joshua's statement of service in 1776 was corroborated by an affidavit from Ezra Clark to the effect that he and Joshua Williams, together with two other Middleborough men, Eliab Alden and Isaac Perkins, served in Captain Allen's company from January, 1776, to January, 1777. Yet none of the four soldiers are included in the roster of "Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors of the Revolution."

Joshua's scars of battle were very real, for during the last fifteen years of his life he suffered greatly from his war-time wounds.

During the seven years following Joshua's return from the Long Island campaign he apparently devoted himself with some degree of success to farming, and certainly during the latter part of that period, to the operation of a gristmill. In November, 1777, he purchased from his brother Silas fourteen acres of land.⁵ He, as well as his brothers, apparently profited by the generosity of his father, John Williams, during the latter's lifetime, for his will⁶ recited concerning each: "I also give him and confirm all those lands I conveyed him by deed of gift dated October 30th current to him and his heirs and assigns forever." To Joshua and Silas in equal shares the father bequeathed his cattle, sheep and swine. John Williams died about 1780.

For several years after his father's death Joshua resided in Taunton. But the pioneer blood of his family quite evidently prompted him to join the great movement then under way for the colonization of the vast territory of Maine. Massachusetts was trying to turn to account this possession of hers, greater in extent than Vermont,

⁵ Bristol Deeds, vol. 60, p. 500.

⁶ The will, recorded in Bristol County Registry of Probate, vol. 26, p. 272, is as follows:

New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut combined. It was a wilderness studded with great rivers and lakes, with virgin forests of valuable timber stretching from the ocean to the borders of Canada. Fish and game in unlimited abundance awaited the pioneer.

Small wonder that Joshua Williams felt the lure of the new country and yielded to the persuasions of its promoters. The following conveyances bear eloquent testimony to the thoroughgoing way in which Joshua and Bethiah Williams "burned their bridges" behind them by converting their Massachusetts property into cash before embarking on that sad and tragic venture in Maine.

On March 22, 1784, Joshua conveyed to his brother George Williams —

Several pieces of land together with my Dwelling House, Gristmill, and all other Buildings thereon, the first peice is that whereon my Dwelling House Stands & Contains Fifty Eight Acres more or less, Forty of which I purchased of Jonathan French by Deed Dated October 3d, 1777, Eighteen Acres I purchased of Silas Williams by Deed reference to said Deeds being had for ye particular Bounds thereof. Also Four Acres and half of Land which I purchased of said Jonathan French by the Deed afores, with ye Prevelidges thereto belonging, and lies on ye Easterly side of ye way. Together with Ten Acres of Land more or less which I purchased of William Williams by Deed Dated January 25th, A.D. 1779, reference being had to said Deed for the perticular Bounds thereof, and what is hereby Conveyed is all my Lands & Buildings in sd Taunton which was formerly my fathers & said Wm. Williams.⁷

On April 6, 1784, Joshua and Silas Williams conveyed to Elijah Burt thirty-five acres of land.⁸ On the same date Joshua conveyed to Joshua Caswell twenty-eight acres of land.⁹

On April 13, 1784, Joshua conveyed to Samuel Holmes fourteen acres of land, but for some reason Bethiah's name does not appear on this deed as releasing dower.¹⁰

On September 2, 1784, Joshua and Silas conveyed to Micah Leonard fifty-four acres of land.¹¹ On September 14, 1784, Joshua apparently completed the task of disposing of his real estate, for on that date he and Silas conveyed to their brother Lemuel Williams four acres of cedar swamp in Middleborough. Strange as it may seem, this deed was not recorded until sixty years later.¹²

⁷ This conveyance was drawn January 23, 1783, but never acknowledged until March, 1784. See Bristol Deeds, vol. 62, p. 542.

⁹ Bristol Deeds, vol. 62, p. 321.

¹⁰ Bristol Deeds, vol. 62, p. 534.

¹² The deed reads as follows:

"Know all Men by these presents that we Joshua Williams & Silas Williams both of Taunton in ye County of Bristol yeomans, in consideration of Three Hundred Silver Dollers paid us by Elijah Burt of sd Taunton Grant, The receipt whereof we do hereby acknowledge, do hereby grant, bargain sell & Convey to him ye said Elijah Burt, his heirs & assigns forever, A Certain Tract of Land in sd Taunton, containing by Estemation Thirty five Acres, and is to Bound as follows viz. Beginning at a stake & heap of stones on ye Westward side of ye Island Road so called, and a little Eastward of Turtle Pond, then running Easterly & Bounding on sd Road Seventy two rods from sd stake & Stones, and to extend so far & back from sd Road on our Land as to make sd Thirty five Acres in as Square a figure as may be continuing ye width of Seventy two rods, the Westerly side Line & Easterly side Line to be parralell.

Emigration to Maine

Considerable mystery exists as to the exact movements of Joshua Williams from September, 1784, to the founding of Plantation No. 33 in eastern Maine more than twenty years later. Family tradition fixes his residence as China, Me. The first census of the United States in 1790 records a Joshua Williams as head of a family in Jones Plantation in the District of Maine.

Investigation reveals interesting facts: The town register of "Sidney, Vassalboro, China and Albion" contains the following:

The town of China justly boasts a varied and interesting history. It was first known as Jones Plantation from the name of "Black" Jones of Gardiner, who with Abraham Burrell surveyed the township.¹³

In this same volume is a chronological list of important events from which the following extract is made:

1773. John Jones and Abraham Burrell surveyed China, laying out 32,000 acres divided into farms of approximately 200 acres each.

1774. Ephriam Clark selected lots 39 and 40 and built his house on the Sumner Hawes farm. Clark's three brothers, Jonathan, Edmund and Andrew and their brother in law, George Fish, secured lots and apparently the parents of these pioneers lived with Ephriam Clark.¹⁴

Although no mention of Joshua Williams has been found by the author in the fragmentary records of the period, it is safe to conclude that he was for many years a resident in that section now known as China, Me.

When we consider the fact that Joshua's wife was Bethiah Clark, and that the town was settled by Clarks, we may perhaps be justified in assuming that they were of the same kindred. This may account for the original migration of the Williams family from Taunton in 1784.

To Have and to Hold said thirty five Acres of Land to him ye said Elijah Burt his heirs and assigns to his & their only use & Behoof forever, and we do covenant to & with him ye said Elijah that we are Lawfully Seized in fee of ye Premises, that they are free of all Incumbrances, and that we have good right to sell & Convey the same as aforesd, and we the said Joshua & Silas do hereby bind ourselves, our heirs Executors & admrs to Warrant & Defend ye above Bargained Premises with their appurtenances to him said Elijah Burt his heirs and assigns forever against ye Lawful Claims & demands of all persons Whatsoever, and I Bethiah the wife of the above named Joshua Williams, do hereby acquit my right of Dower in the above described Premises to him sd Elijah his heirs and assigns.

In Witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands & Seals this Sixth day of April in ye year of our Lord one thousand Seven hundred and Eighty four. — 1784.

However high the hopes of fortune that may have actuated Joshua Williams in exchanging his prosperous condition in Taunton for the allurements of Maine, it is certain that those hopes were never fulfilled. The money that he had realized from the sale of his Massachusetts properties quite obviously vanished during the years. Shortly after the new century dawned we find him in his old age undertaking a new venture at colonization.

CHAPTER IV

THE BINGHAM PURCHASE AND SETTLEMENT OF PLANTATION NO. 33

In order to dispose of wild lands in Maine and to add to its treasury in the process, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in 1786 instituted a great land lottery.¹ Two thousand seven hundred and twenty lottery tickets of the value of £64 each were offered. Fifty townships of six miles square, east of the Penobscot River, were offered as prizes, — fifteen in the eastern division, thirty in the middle division, and five in the northern division. Township No. 33 was in the middle division.

The lottery scheme would have netted Massachusetts a considerable sum had it succeeded, but it proved a dismal failure.² William Bingham, a wealthy merchant and banker of Philadelphia, drew some of the townships and was persuaded to purchase all the lottery townships not taken by others.

The conveyance from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to William Bingham was dated January 28, 1793. The deed contained the following provisions:

The within deed delivered in escrow to be given to William Bingham, his heirs or attorney, upon production of a certificate from the treasurer of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts that one hundred and seventy six settlers were placed on the 2,000,000 acres of land sold by the said Commonwealth to said Bingham on or before the first day of July 1798.

The deed apparently was delivered on schedule time, for it was recorded in the Registry of Deeds in Hancock County, Maine, September 1, 1794.³ A power of attorney to General David Cobb of Taunton, Mass., was later placed on record. He was to act as agent of William Bingham in the "sale and oversight of the lands granted in Eastern Maine."

In the life of General David Cobb, in the "Bangor Historical Magazine,"⁴ it is stated that General Cobb was appointed in 1795 and immediately assumed his duties. He remained in Gouldsboro, Me., until 1820, when he returned to his old home in Taunton. Doubtless before that date he had surrendered his heavy duties as agent of the Bingham estate to his son-in-law, Colonel John Black. General Cobb died April 17, 1830.

The fact that General Cobb settled in Taunton as a practicing physician in 1766, and was active in town affairs until the Revolution, leads to the conclusion that he must have been well acquainted with Joshua Williams. Possibly it was that friendship that led the venturesome Joshua at sixty years of age to attempt to colonize a township at the headwaters of Union River, in the county of Hancock, one of the townships over which General Cobb had oversight.

Settlement of Great Pond

All accounts agree that Joshua Williams was the founder of Plantation No. 33, known as Great Pond, on the west branch of Union River. It is situated in the midst of a vast wilderness of forest at the end of the road, the farthest outpost of civilization in the northern reaches of Hancock County. It is thirty-two miles easterly from Bangor, and about thirty-three miles north of Ellsworth.

The date of the founding for many years has been erroneously recorded as 1810.⁵ The author's investigations have completely disproved this date, but unfortunately have not been able to establish the correct one. That the hamlet was settled some years previous to 1810 is evident from the deed by which the Bingham estate for $20,360 conveyed Township No. 33 to Joseph Tilden of Boston on February 4, 1810.

In the conveyance, after identifying the property conveyed as Township No. 33 in the middle division containing 23,040 acres, there was a reservation of various lots "including five several lots of 160 acres each now occupied by sundry settlers, viz.: Lots No. 9 and No. 10 in the first range lying south of the great pond, also lots No. 8, No. 9, No. 10 in the next range adjoining as appears from a plan of the eastern half of No. 33, laid down and run by Benjamin Kimball, surveyor, in the year 1809."⁶

Inasmuch as this section of Maine is a comparatively inaccessible place in the dead of winter, and no settler however rash would think of laying down a settlement at such a time, it is evident that this hamlet must have been in existence some time prior to February 4, 1810. The further fact that the deed of conveyance was drawn in far-away Philadelphia, and that the rights of the settlers were so definitely recognized, is proof positive that the founding of Great Pond considerably antedated 1810.

The recital of a survey in 1809 of the lands which the settlers had selected might also indicate that they were on the ground and had staked their claims before the arrival of an official surveyor.

The identity of the settlers occupying the five lots is of course problematical. The lots were large. There may have been more than five claimants. If there were merely that number it is possible that we have a clue to their identity: first, Joshua Williams; second, Silas Williams, a brother of Joshua; third, Simeon Williams, a son

"No. 33 PLANTATION

Thirty-two miles n ne of Bangor. First settled by Joshua Williams in 1810. Organized into a plantation in 1840. Population, 1870=102 1880=118 1890=112 1900=82 1910=54 1900, Polls 27 1910, Polls 19."

of Joshua; fourth, Clark Williams, another son; fifth, John Collar from China, Me., a son-in-law of the leader of the expedition.

This supposition is based in part upon a statement dictated in Chelsea, Me., by Louisa Williams, the widow of George Williams, March 22, 1911, two weeks before her death at the age of eighty-five. George Williams himself was one of the first children born in Great Pond. Louisa came to the place as a bride about 1843, when the early history of the hamlet must have been well known to the early inhabitants, for Louisa's father-in-law, Simeon, one of the original settlers, lived for fifteen years after that date.

The aged woman's statement was somewhat rambling and confused. Her granddaughter, Olive Williams, wrote it out at her request. That portion relating to the founding is as follows:

His father [Simeon's father, Joshua] and mother, also his father's brother Silas and sister Sarah,⁷ in company with John Collar and his family moved to Plantation No. 33, then a wilderness. They came from Bangor in an ox-team, through the woods on a spotted line.⁸ They built themselves log houses. The government⁹ having promised to give them land and a certain sum of money [which they didn't get] if they would start a settlement there.

The spotted trail through the forest indicates that scouts had been there ahead of them. Fortunately we are able to identify those earlier visitors to the hamlet as Simeon and Clark Williams, sons of Joshua.

No one statement tells the whole story, but in January, 1915, Mrs. James F. Emery, a granddaughter of Simeon, prepared for a Bangor newspaper a "Brief History of Great Pond," evidently based upon her late mother's recollections of early days, and possibly upon her own knowledge, for she was fifteen years of age at the death of her grandfather, Simeon, one of the scouts who blazed the trail from Bangor.

Mrs. Emery falls into the prevailing error of fixing the date of founding after the sale of the township to Joseph Tilden, whereas the deed of conveyance definitely establishes the founding as having occurred as early as 1809 and perhaps earlier. There are other pardonable inaccuracies in her story, a part of which reads as follows:

In about 1811 the township of No. 33, a part of the Bingham purchase, was owned by Squire Tilden of Boston who offered brilliant inducements with many promises of good times to come, to those who had courage enough to brave the dangers of pioneer life. A party from Massachusetts,¹⁰ among whom were Simeon and Clark Williams, came through an unbroken forest and landed at the foot of Great Pond. Simeon felled the forest tree. They commenced clearing about forty rods from the pond choosing the highest

⁷ There is no daughter of that name in the known list of ten children of John Williams. Possibly this was the wife of Silas.

⁸ Spotted on tree trunks with an axe by slicing off on two sides a portion of bark and leaving a white spot so that in following the line from either direction one spotted tree can be seen from another in unbroken succession.

⁹ Doubtless meaning General Cobb, the agent of the Bingham estate.

¹⁰ The author's investigations lead him to believe that whoever were in the party doubtless came from China, Me., as representatives of Joshua Williams to whom General Cobb had perhaps offered the honor of settling the township.

land,¹¹ erected a log cabin or two and went back with a favorable report of this part of the Pine Tree State.

Clark Williams and his father, Joshua, a Revolutionary soldier from Rhode Island,¹² John Collar from China, Me., Mr. Dyke, a half-brother of Addison Dodge and a few other families came here with a view to settlement.

After a few years Mr. Tilden sold out to John Black.¹³ His promise of roads, mills and settlers proved a failure. Discouraged, all went back to their native lands except three families, Joshua Williams, his son Clark and John Collar.

Thus we have two statements made within four years of each other in far distant towns, without collaboration of any sort, that are in substantial agreement on the main facts of the settlement of Great Pond.

But we also have a statement from Mrs. Ezra N. Williams¹⁴ of Bangor, Me., made in January, 1927, in which the following occurs:

Joshua Williams came to Plantation No. 33 because he was a millman, on the promises that twenty families would be added to the settlement, mills erected and homes built to provide for a great many more, which no doubt appealed to a man who knew lumbering thoroughly and had a grown-up family of boys. The "bubble" burst and we know what followed, — the hardships, the log cabin in the rocky wilderness, the disappointments and his appeal to his sons for aid.

Joshua Williams built his cabin on the gentle westerly slope of the great oval hill lying between five ponds that border it in a semi-circular string, Great Pond being much larger than the other four. One of the mysteries concerning Joshua Williams' life in Plantation No. 33 is the fact that not a single conveyance of land is on record in Hancock County with his name attached. In fact, there is not a single conveyance of land in the hamlet on record prior to 1864. It is significant that the first records were of mortgages.

There is a tragic story here involved. The humble and ignorant descendants of Joshua Williams were then, nearly sixty years after the founding, summoned by the newly appointed trustees of the estate of John Black to pay for their several holdings. Not being able to produce title deeds some of them were obliged to give mortgages to the trustees, and to toil weary years to work off their indebtedness.

The tragedy of the affair lies in this: The author's investigations indicate that the Black estate never had title to the lots in question, since they were undoubtedly the very lots specifically reserved in ¹¹ Considerably more than forty rods — nearly half a mile if they selected the highest land.

¹² This statement caused the author no end of trouble in unearthing the facts, for it has no genuine basis of truth. Mrs. Emery's mother, Frances K. Lord, was a peculiar old lady in her last years. She desperately desired to establish relationship to Roger Williams, and not knowing where Joshua came from hit upon Rhode Island, which was founded by Roger Williams.

¹³ Here she is quite evidently confused, for the Registry of Deeds of Hancock County show that the sale to John Black occurred November 10, 1847. See Hancock Deeds, vol. 82, p. 385.

the conveyance of February 4, 1810,¹⁵ whereby the Bingham estate conveyed the Plantation to Joseph Tilden, the predecessor in title of Black. Unless the Bingham estate had already conveyed these "five several lots of 160 acres each now occupied by settlers," there was no reason why the entire Plantation should not have passed to the new owner. Doubtless these conveyances were unrecorded and were finally lost or destroyed, with the result that the unfortunate descendants of the original settlers were obliged to buy their farms all over again.

A circumstance that strengthens this supposition of unrecorded conveyances from the Bingham estate is the fact that on March 26, 1825, Joshua Williams conveyed to James Williams, his grandson, "one half of the undivided lot No. 9 sixth range, Township No. 33 & also the one half of lot 9 fifth range" intending thereby to create an entailed estate in the blood of the said James.

James was then a child of twelve years. The deed was never recorded and James was probably unaware of its existence to the day of his death, for it was found a few years ago in some old papers belonging to Frances K. Lord, a sister of James, who in turn had found it in the effects of her mother after the latter's death in 1877. Until it came to the author's attention, within a year, doubtless no one had recognized its character.

Now Joshua Williams was a business man of much experience. That he would attempt to convey land to which he had no title is unthinkable. The unfortunate part of the affair was that the disorganized state of the wilderness of eastern Maine encouraged fatal delays in recording deeds, with the result that later owners of the township, perhaps innocently, imposed great hardships upon the poverty-ridden dwellers on the barren hillside known as Great Pond.

CHAPTER V

LAST DAYS OF JOSHUA WILLIAMS

Very little is known of the last twenty-four years of Joshua's life. He continued to reside in the little hamlet, and quite evidently made a brave struggle to support his wife and minor children. That he was an invalid and that the hardships of the wilderness bore heavily upon him is apparent from the fact that he applied for a pension immediately after the act of Congress of March, 1818, providing for pensions of disabled and needy veterans of the Revolutionary War.

His application for a pension was filed April 20, 1818, and was promptly allowed. The application recited the following: "Joshua Williams of Tilden's Plantation, on Union River, Penobscot County Maine, yeoman aged 71."

The error as to county is easily explainable. The county boundaries in this vast wilderness were then vague indeed. Bangor was the shire town of Penobscot County, and apparently all of Joshua's business affairs were conducted in Bangor. It was natural for him to suppose that he lived in Penobscot County.

From the pension records we may gain some definite information concerning the old soldier, and also concerning Bethiah Williams, his devoted helpmate.

Nov 2, 1818, Martin Kinsley, J. C. C. P. [Judge court of Common Pleas(?)] Penobscot County testified. Well acquainted with Joshua Williams who was aged and very infirm and has a sick wife to provide for.

This was evidently near the date of Bethiah's death, for in the next pension entry, September 19, 1820, there is no mention of a wife, but there is a mention of a daughter twenty years of age as the only child living with him.

It is known from family tradition in Great Pond that after the death of Joshua's wife his condition grew steadily worse. His wartime wounds now made him quite helpless, and his son Simeon, then in prosperous circumstances in New Brunswick, was summoned home to care for his father. Simeon brought with him his wife and four small children, the oldest then about ten years of age.

In the home that Simeon provided, the old soldier lived out the remaining days of his life. The date of his death is uncertain. The last pension payment was made March 4, 1833. Death must have occurred during that year.

Thus closed the chapter of adventure that began so bravely. Joshua and Bethiah Williams had followed the rainbow to its end. Today they sleep in unknown graves in what was once their mowing field in Great Pond. A small grove of evergreen trees has covered the site, and no person in passing the place would suspect it to be the last resting place of the founders of the hamlet.

Children of Joshua Williams

To Joshua and Bethiah (Clark) Williams were born the following children (this may not be the order of births):

1. CLARK, born in 1773,¹ probably in Middleborough, Mass.; one of the original settlers of Great Pond; moved to Clifton, Me., in 1836; died in Clifton May 1, 1861.
2. MARY,² born — ; died January 15, 1859;³ married John Collar, who died in 1854.⁴
3. SIMEON, born 1782⁵ (according to age on tombstone). He died in Great Pond May 1, 1858, age seventy-six years; one of the original settlers of Great Pond.
4. JOSHUA, Jr., went to New Brunswick probably in 1810 or 1811; was a very successful lumberman; said to have been murdered for his money.⁶
5. BERTHA. No information concerning her.
6. BETSY. Said to have married a Peter Schuyler.⁷

² This name on list by Louisa Williams previously quoted.

³ Information furnished by Nathan R. Collar of Franklin, Me.

⁴ Information from W. A. Collar, Chelsea, Me.

⁵ Louisa Williams stated that he was born in 1776.

⁶ An interesting bit of evidence concerning Joshua, Jr., is contained in an undated affidavit executed by Judah West and George M. Silsby as "assessors of Plantation No. 33." (So far as known neither lived in Great Pond. Silsby certainly lived in Aurora. Because the Plantation was not organized the custom doubtless was for the officials of the next adjoining town to take jurisdiction.) Quite obviously the document was prepared for the use of Simeon when he went to New Brunswick, after his brother's tragic death, to look up his reputed wealth which had quite vanished. The affidavit reads as follows:

"STATE OF MAINE

COUNTY OF HANCOCK — TILDEN PLANTATION, SO CALLED, ON UNION RIVER. —

We the subscribers assessors of said Plantation do hereby certify that Joshua Williams and Bethiah Williams wife of said Joshua are inhabitants of this place and that they had a son according to our best knowledge and belief which we knew to be such as far as we know any man's & woman's son by the name of Joshua Williams Junior who, if now living, would be about twenty seven years of age. Said Joshua left this place about five years since and went into the British Dominions about that time — as it was said.

She died when quite young."³

CHARITY COLLAR (Mary,² *Joshua*¹).

CHARITY COLLAR, daughter of John Collar,⁴ married Curtis Sabine and lived in Great Pond. Curtis was the first postmaster. JAMES COLLAR, son of John Collar, was born January 28, 1818, second white child born in Great Pond. He lived in the hamlet all his life, dying October 30, 1901.⁵ He was one of the substantial citizens of the place, and was a carpenter by trade in the days when all house and barn frames were hand hewn with a broadaxe. He also pulled teeth for any one brave enough to endure the process, using a "cant-dog." He was very bald, had a hare-lip, and wore a hedge of white whiskers under his chin. When the author was a child he spent many pleasant hours listening to the old man's yarns. They invariably began "Hi-ho-hum. Well, forty years ago," or some other exact date.⁶ He lived in the house below the church and on the same side. James Collar married Maria Kenney, daughter of Nathaniel Kenney, September 5, 1860. She died December 11, 1892.

⁴ Information furnished by Mary A. Williams.

⁶ Rev. Leonard S. Williams relates the following concerning the old man:

"Jim Collar was very kind to animals. Once he trained a favorite hen so that it would alight on a shovel which he would hold out for it. It was his custom to go to the blueberry plains each year with a hogshead to lay in a winter's supply of sauce. He would stew the berries on the plains and pour them into the container until it was full. Once I was at his house when he brought the berries home. It seems they had fermented, and when he touched the bung it blew up and drenched the whole family who had gathered around.

CHAPTER VII

SIMEON WILLIAMS BRANCH

SIMEON WILLIAMS (*Joshua*¹).

SIMEON WILLIAMS, son of Joshua and Bethiah (Clark) Williams, was probably born in Taunton, Mass., about 1782.¹ In the story of the founding of Great Pond Simeon and his brother Clark were mentioned as those who first ventured into the wilderness to "spy out the land." He was certainly one of the first settlers of the place.

It is also certain that he and Clark Williams became dissatisfied with the barren prospects of the wilderness and set forth to seek their fortunes in the heavily wooded valley of the St. John River in New Brunswick. The date of leaving Great Pond was probably that of the general migration that left the aged Joshua and his son-in-law, John Collar, as practically the only adult male inhabitants of the settlement. The year of the migration is uncertain, but under date of April 13, 1810, Clark and Joshua Williams signed a contract with one Samuel Nevers, Jr., to cut lumber for the said Nevers near one of the tributaries of the St. John River. This is additional proof that Great Pond was settled some years prior to 1810.

The next official evidence of Simeon's sojourn in New Brunswick is contained in the records of the Land Office at Frederickton, N.B., as unearthed by the author on a personal investigation in April, 1927. A family tradition averred that Simeon and two others received a valuable grant of land from the King of England, and that Simeon's share had never been sold. The grant was located after much difficulty. It was entitled a grant to "John McKean and three others," and was executed in behalf of George III as grantor on October 30, 1813.

The grantees were John McKean, Clark Williams, Simeon Williams and John Simonds. The tract consisted of twelve hundred and eighty acres "lying and being between the Rear line of the Grant on the River Saint John to Charles Morris, Junior, and the rear lines of the lots on the northwest Branch of the Rushagonis stream, in the Grants to John Morgan and son and to Jonathan Strickland and associates, and of the grant to William Hazen, esquire, and associates, within the Parish of Lincoln in the county of Sunbury."

Family tradition did not hesitate to attach fabulous value to this land. It was reported to be the very tract upon which the city of St. John now stands. The author's first trip to New Brunswick completely demolished this legend, for the land grant was demonstrated to be about six miles from Frederickton.

¹ Louisa Williams, a daughter-in-law, when eighty-five years old, and a few days before her death, declared that Simeon was born in 1776. Simeon's tombstone in the Great Pond cemetery states that he was seventy-six at the date of his death (May 1, 1858). His children, eight of them then living, as well as his wife, would have known whether Simeon was seventy-six or eighty-two. His tombstone is therefore the more reliable testimony.

It remained for the author's second trip, this time by automobile in July, 1927, to identify the land itself. He was accompanied by his uncle, Rev. Leonard S. Williams, and by his son Allan F. Archer. None of the three can ever forget the wild ride that befell them in "circumnavigating" this land. The atlas indicated that the junction of two country roads, both branching off from the river road south of Frederickton, was near the corner of the land, and that the entire tract lay within the gore formed by the roads.

Unfortunately the author turned his machine into the first of the two roads and soon found himself in a narrow woods road that led through a swamp with corduroy at frequent intervals and hurdle-like bridges over narrow brooks. This road was about five miles long and nearly all of it swamp — a sad adventure for a brand-new sedan of five thousand pounds' weight, not to mention a driver but one month away from an operation for appendicitis. Once in the swamp it was needful to charge from one bump to another in imminent danger of wrecking the machine, for to pause was to become mired. The party emerged on to dry ground quite willing to surrender all claim to the scrubby forest that once was the proud possession of Simeon Williams.

Later in the same day it was discovered in the registry of the little town of Oromocto that both Clark and Simeon Williams conveyed away their interests in the "swamp" in 1821.

Whether Simeon owned other land in New Brunswick is uncertain. He is said to have lived in Oromocto for several years and also in Magaguadavic,² N. B.

While Simeon was in New Brunswick he met, wooed and won a beautiful girl by the name of Harriet Kenney. The marriage occurred in Woodstock, N. B. Her mother's name was Elizabeth, but the name of her father is unknown. She had a brother Asa Kenney, a sister Frances, who married Richard Kimball of New Brunswick, as well as other sisters: Mary, Susan, Maria, Eliza and Sally.³

Harriet Kenney was a mere child of fourteen, and her husband, whom she afterward described as "her blue eyed Yankee lover," was a man of thirty when the marriage took place. But no marriage could have been more fortunate for Simeon Williams or for his descendants. Harriet Kenney Williams was a tower of spiritual strength, and her influence lives even yet in her descendants.

To her influence whatever of religious life the rough lumbering hamlet of Great Pond ever experienced was largely attributable. She came of an intensely religious family. Such letters of her mother and sisters as are now extant are sermons in themselves, and terrible ones at that.

Simeon moved to Great Pond to care for his aged father about the year 1821, at which time, according to the census of 1820, there were but fourteen people in the place. He continued to reside there until his death, May 1, 1858, at the age of seventy-six.⁴ Harriet outlived her husband for more than nineteen years. Her death occurred August 12, 1877, at the age of seventy-nine years.⁴ She was thus a resident of the hamlet for fifty-seven years.

Dana (Archer) Williams (Mrs. Ezra N. Williams), a granddaughter, has written the following tribute to the couple: "Simeon at the time of coming to No. 33 had three boys, born in the Province of New Brunswick. They moved by ox team and in cold weather. What prospects for a young mother not much past her twentieth birthday, who had lived in St. John and Frederickton, married at the age of fourteen, her eldest son James born when she was fifteen years old! We know what she proved herself to be through all her hardships. Then began the life in the little rock-bound wilderness with an increasing family, the aged Joshua to care for. Simeon felled trees and burned them to plant his crops. James and Thomas, with their hoes (while the father was working at his trade as a cobbler), planted the garden without plowing — what they called 'niggering in' with a hoe on burnt land. Thus began the vigorous life of those two youngsters. Then as they grew older, which would only seem school age now, they assumed the care of the family, since their father, who was much older than their mother, had become broken in health."

CHAPTER VIII

DESCENDANTS OF SIMEON — JAMES WILLIAMS BRANCH

JAMES WILLIAMS, the eldest child of Simeon and Harriet (Kenney) Williams, was born April 15, 1813, when his mother was but fifteen years of age. He was small of stature, wiry and bald in his old age. Lacking in education and in the religious instincts of the family, he nevertheless developed into the recognized leader of the community in all secular affairs. His dominant personality and picturesque language rendered him a very efficient wood's boss.

With his brother Thomas, until the latter's death in 1864, James conducted lumbering operations. Thereafter until after his seventy-fifth year he was to be found every winter in the vigorous prosecution of some lumbering enterprise.

"Dana" (Archer) Williams, his daughter-in-law, has supplied the author with much information concerning him. She writes in part:

James, the most adventurous one, went to Cherryfield to hire men and oxen. There he met Lucinda Jaques whom he hired to come to Great Pond and teach his younger brothers and sisters a few weeks in the year. The result was that she married the young lumberman and settled in town. . . . He never cared for agriculture only as a means to further his lumbering business. He never milked a cow or could. He never ate lamb and gave as his reason that once in his boyhood they were obliged to kill some of their sheep, carrying lambs, to keep starvation from the door and even dig up potatoes after they had planted them. He cared nothing for music or art but cleanliness was next to godliness with him. A fast horse was his pride. . . . I lived in the family fourteen years. Whatever his failings were he was always a good father. He was kind and thoughtful of me.

Lucinda Jaques was born in the month of October, 1818. She was a granddaughter¹ of John and Elizabeth (Tupper) Archer. She married James Williams in 1837 and bore him eight children. She died May 7, 1884, at the age of sixty-five.

Itinerant Elders came to the hamlet occasionally and preached in the little red schoolhouse, but every Sunday, when no outside talent was available, Uncle George "held forth" to the faithful. He had a rustic eloquence that made deep impression upon the author when he was a small child.

George Williams married Louisa Richardson (born August 6, 1825; died April 4, 1911) of Aurora. Louisa outlived her husband for twenty-one years. She was a woman of strong character with a calm and placid disposition.

FRANCES WILLIAMS, daughter of Simeon and Harriet (Kenney) Williams, was born July 11, 1826. She was a woman of great force of character, able, and eager in discussion of all topics. The first and only inn in the little settlement was established by her and her husband, Tobias Lord. She lived to an advanced age, being much crippled by rheumatism in her later years, and also somewhat inclined to mental derangement. Tobias Lord was a gentle, mild-mannered man, somewhat subdued, no doubt, by his dominating and energetic spouse. They had but one child:

CHILD

1. HARRIET AMANDA LORD, born June 9, 1845, in Greenfield, Me. Harriet was given educational advantages not enjoyed by others in the hamlet, and when a young lady became teacher of the Great Pond school. The author has in his possession an original record of the school as kept by Harriet Amanda Lord in 1865-66, showing that there were then thirty-one pupils in attendance. She married James F. Emery, a lumberman, who built a house across the highway from the Lord Tavern. Later, when Mrs. Lord became feeble, they moved across and took charge of the establishment. Mrs. Emery was the leader of the feminine portion of the community, and was active in Sunday school affairs. She died October 28, 1921. James F. Emery was born in 1832 and died in 1907. He had travelled considerably, having tried unsuccessfully to make his fortune in the gold regions of California. To this ambitious couple came a bitter disappointment in that their only child was a dwarf, and very much deformed. This child was Florence Percy Emery, born August 1, 1869; died April 18, 1902. Despite the fact that she could never talk distinctly, owing to her deformity, "Flossie" was nevertheless a brilliant student. She was a musician and possessed some literary talent. For many years she was local correspondent for Ellsworth and Bangor newspapers.

DESCENDANTS OF SIMEON — HARRIET WILLIAMS AND TILDEN WILLIAMS

HARRIET WILLIAMS (Simeon,² Joshua¹).

HARRIET WILLIAMS, daughter of Simeon and Harriet (Kenney) Williams, was born in Great Pond May 1, 1830. She married Samuel Colson Archer of Cherryfield, Me. (born January 25, 1819), in the spring of 1849, and went to Cherryfield to live. Her husband was an educated and talented man, a colonel in the Maine Militia. His house was more or less a centre of social life, for he was a skilful violinist. The bride from the wilderness quite naturally found herself out of her element in such surroundings. Her longing for her own people became so great that about 1860 Samuel Archer disposed of his home in Cherryfield and moved to Great Pond, where he lived the few remaining years of his life. He was an expert brick mason, but the wilderness community offered little opportunity for his skill. When the author was a small boy James Collar took him into the cellar of his home (where Edgar McIninch now lives) and showed him the brick arches and chimney base as a sample of the skill of Samuel Archer. Every brick in the Collar chimney was laid by Grandfather Archer. Samuel Archer died of Brights disease June 20, 1865.

The widow married Hilbert Page Colson (born May 11, 1847) on February 29, 1868. She lived with him for many years in Cherryfield, Great Pond and Wesley, Me. Hilbert Colson died September 28, 1903; Harriet died in July, 1915.

4. ISABEL ARCHER, born May 1, 1857. Fell into the fireplace when only a toddling child and received burns from which she died.
5. VIENNA WILLEY ARCHER, born October 25, 1859. Because the name Vienna was mispronounced "Dana" by the other children, she has gone by that name all her life. As "Dana Williams" or "Mrs. Ezra N. Williams" her name frequently occurs in this history, for she has furnished much information to the author (for her family see James Williams Branch).
6. ELLA BELLE ARCHER, born February 9, 1861. She was a very intelligent and talented woman with a sunny disposition that endeared her to all. She married William Gifford, December 25, 1879. CHAPTER XIII

ARCHER, TUPPER AND SPOONER ANCESTRY

It would be apparent that the Archer blood contributed largely to the Williams family of Plantation No. 33. James Williams started the interalliance by marrying Lucinda Jaques, a granddaughter of John and Elizabeth (Tupper) Archer. Asa Williams followed the example by marrying Direxa Dunn, also a granddaughter. Harriet Williams married Samuel C. Archer, a grandson of the same couple. Melissa Williams, daughter of James, also married a grandson of John Archer in the person of Clark Dunn. Out of a total of fifty-one grandchildren of Simeon Williams, twenty-six were also descendants of John and Elizabeth Archer. No study of ancestral background would be complete without a brief résumé of the Archer and Tupper lines.

Archer Line

The Archer family is of Norman origin, being descendants of Fulbert L'Archere and his son Robert, who came to England in the Norman invasion and whose names are recorded in Battle Abbey as having rendered notable service to William the Conqueror. There was a yet more signal mark of William's favor manifested by his act in entrusting the education of Prince Henry to Robert L'Archere. How efficiently the latter discharged his trust history bears witness, for when the prince came to the throne as Henry I, he was known to the world as "Henry the Scholar."

King Henry showered honors and benefits upon his preceptor. From the beginning, therefore, the Archer family took its place in English society as of the "landed gentry." At the time of the American Revolution the titular head of the family in England was Lord Thomas Archer, Baron of Umberslade.

At this very time John Archer, a highly educated young man who had come to this country in the British Army prior to the Revolution, disgraced his aristocratic relatives in England by renouncing a tyrannical king and espousing the cause of the Colonists. In fact, it was while serving as sergeant major and chemist in charge of the gunpowder laboratory in the little garrison at Machias, Me., that he met, wooed and won Elizabeth Tupper. They were married in Machias by the Rev. James Lyon November 18, 1778.¹

Marriage, however, did not interfere with the young soldier's service. He continued in the Patriot Army, by repeated enlistments, until the close of the war. His last period of service was in the "Jersey campaign."

After the war he settled for a time in Newburyport, Mass., but later went to eastern Maine and assisted in surveying the wilderness and laying it out into townships. He was one of the original settlers of Cherryfield, Me., where he lived to an advanced age. His offspring were numerous in the extreme, — twenty-one children, sixteen boys and five girls, a record even among pioneers. All were born to one wife, Elizabeth (Tupper) Archer.

Further history of the Archer family will follow the Tupper ancestry.

Tupper Line

The first American ancestor of the Tupper family was Thomas Tupper, who embarked from the port of London September 2, 1635.² He went first to Saugus (Lynn), Mass., but was one of ten men to whom Plymouth Colony, on April 3, 1637, granted permission "to view a place and set down a town for three score families."³ The place chosen was Sandwich, Mass.

Thomas Tupper appears to have been very prominent in the affairs of the new town. He was one of eleven male members of the Sandwich church in its early days.⁴ He was a deputy or representative in the General Court for nineteen years, beginning in 1646.⁵

The Sandwich church appears to have developed factions, one of which, Thomas Tupper, was the leader. In 1663 the minister left them.

After the departure of Mr. Leverich from Sandwich, there was no regularly settled minister in town for some years. Mr. Thomas Tupper, known more prominently as Captain Tupper, undertook, although not acceptable to the staunch friends of Rev. Mr. Leverich, to conduct religious services in the meeting house; and, strange to say, though he was without ordination and withal somewhat fanatical and ranting if we are to credit tradition, and often in difficulties with his neighbors, was in favor with the government (of which few of the respectable inhabitants could at that time boast), so that no objection to his officiating was made by court influence.⁶

Tupper was later a preacher to the Indians in Mashpee for many years. He lived to a great age, as will be seen from the following:

"Mr. Thomas Tupper, Sr., who has all along been conspicuous in Town affairs and as a religious teacher greatly interested in the welfare of the Indians died this year (1676) at a great age. His descendants are numerous." (He died Mar. 28, 1676 at upwards of 98 years). His wife died this same year, age 90.

He was one of the original grantees. He was selectman of the town for many years, Deputy to the general court for nineteen years and filled various offices, besides giving much of his time to the work of "gospelizing the Indians."⁷

Whom he married and just how many children he had is uncertain.

Thomas Tupper, Jr., son of the above, is thought to have been born in 1637. He married December 27, 1661, Martha Mayhew (born in Watertown in 1638), daughter of Governor Thomas Mayhew of Martha's Vineyard.

Thomas Tupper, Jr., seems to have followed in the footsteps of his father. He was selectman of Sandwich for fourteen years. He served as town clerk and also for eight years as a deputy in the General Court.⁹ His son, Eliakim Tupper, was also on the board of selectmen of Sandwich for twelve years. Further than this there is little mention of Eliakim. The name of his wife is unknown to the author.

Of Eliakim's son, Eliakim, Jr., however, there is a fairly complete record. He was born June 20, 1711. He married Mary Bassett¹⁰ March 28, 1734, and evidently moved to Plymouth, for we find that on October 2, 1737, Mary joined the First Church of Plymouth, to be followed two weeks later into the same congregation by her husband.¹¹ Two children were baptized in Plymouth: (1) Mary, on June 1, 1739,¹² and (2) Charles Tupper, on August 21, 1748.¹³

Eliakim Tupper, Jr., later moved to Lebanon, Conn. He became a deacon in the church. He was a representative in the General Court and also a captain in the military protection of the town.

The ousting of the Arcadians from Nova Scotia drew many New England men to that region. Eliakim emigrated to Kings County, N. S., and took up a tract of crown land in 1763.¹⁴

The oldest child of Captain Eliakim Tupper, Jr., was William

¹⁰ Mary Bassett was descended from a very distinguished family of whom royal ancestry is claimed. The first member to reach America was William Bassett, who came to Plymouth in 1621 on the "Fortune." He later moved to Duxbury and was for five years its deputy in the General Court. He was one of the proprietors and first settlers of Bridgewater in 1651. His son William, Jr., married Mary Burt, daughter of Hugh Burt of Lynn, settled in Sandwich, and was one of its deputies in the General Court. He had a son, William, 3d, who was born in 1656. William, 3d, married Rachel Willison of Taunton October 6, 1675. To this couple was born William Bassett, 4th, who married Abigail Bourne February 3, 1709. On December 24, 1709, Mary Bassett was born. She married Eliakim Tupper, Jr., March 28, 1734.

Tupper, born July 6, 1735. He married Margaret the daughter of William Gates.¹⁵ Mary, the daughter of William and Mary (Gates) Tupper, was born in Connecticut in 1753.

Evidently William Tupper accompanied his father to Nova Scotia. Why he returned to Maine can be accounted for on the hypothesis that his sympathy for the colonies would not permit him to remain among the loyalists of Nova Scotia. There was a considerable immigration from Nova Scotia to Maine at that time, and the government of Massachusetts took some measures to protect them in a little colony formed at Machias. The fact that William's daughter Elizabeth married a soldier of the patriot garrison is also significant.

The following mention is taken from the "Bangor Historical Magazine:"¹⁶

Among the early settlers of Machias who came from Cornwallis, Nova Scotia, and vicinity was William Tupper, who came in 1769.

The "Maine Historical Magazine"¹⁷ gives further evidence:

Other settlers came prior to the Revolution, notably Stephen Smith, George Stillman, James Flynn, William Tupper and others.

Like all his forbears William Tupper was an ardent churchman.

In 1774 the first meeting house (Congregational) was built near where the town house now stands. It was built by Stephen Jones, Stephen Smith, James Flynn, David Longfellow, William Tupper . . . at a cost of $220.¹⁸

William Tupper was chosen as the first town clerk of Machias.¹⁹ He evidently continued to hold the position for some years, certainly as late as 1781.²⁰

William Tupper later moved to Jonesboro. He was its first postmaster.²¹ It was a daughter of this man who married John Archer, the soldier, and became the mother of the numerous family of twenty-one children. John Archer and Elizabeth Tupper were married in Machias, Me., November 18, 1778. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. James Lyon.

At the close of the war John Archer and his family lived for a time in Newburyport, Mass. He then returned to the vicinity of Machias and assisted in the surveying of the townships in the eastern wilderness. He also taught school.

He was one of the founders of the towns of Columbia and Cherryfield. The latter became his home. That he was very highly regarded by his townsmen is evidenced by the fact that from the first town meeting of Cherryfield in 1807 until the year 1815 John Archer was every year chosen to public office. He was elected collector of taxes and assessor in 1807, 1808, 1809, 1810 and was assessor every year until 1815. He acted as moderator or chairman of the town meeting in 1809, 1810, 1811, 1812, 1813, 1814 and 1815. During the trying days of the 1812 war he was chairman of a committee of safety, and drew up a petition to the Massachusetts Legislature for military supplies for local defense.

In Milliken's History, "The Narraguagus Valley," ²² occurs the following:

I find in the records the following memorial, evidently the production of the senior John Archer, which I deem of sufficient interest to be embodied in this sketch:

"To His Excellency, the Governor, the Honorable, the Council, and the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in General Court assembled: The inhabitants of the Plantation of Cherryfield in the county of Washington, at a legal meeting holden on the eighteenth day of July 1812, for the purpose of consulting upon the common good and welfare of our Country at this eventful and alarming crisis, unanimously voted that the assessors be a committee of safety and correspondence to lay before the Government our situation and sentiments and to request some pecuniary aid. Therefore we beg leave to state to your Excellency and Honorable Body that though we are few in number and though the means of embargo restrictions and other embarrassments on us are reduced to low circumstances in life, yet we trust we are not behind the most opulent in attachment to our Constitutional rights and privileges, the which we are determined to support at the hazard of all that is near and dear to us; . . . for as our situation in the District of Maine is so contiguous to the British lines that it exposes us to every distress and calamity, should they attempt it, without any means in our power to prevent any attack on our shores — therefore feeling our inability of defense and not having resources to furnish ourselves at present we would beg leave to request your Excellency and Honors to take our case into consideration and grant a small supply of arms and ammunition to enable us in case of actual invasion to make a more efficient defense than we now can. The quantum needed is as follows: Ten stands of arms, one half cwt of powder, one cwt of balls or lead, 200 flints and two camp kettles, the which articles so supplied the assessors become responsible for the payment thereof agreeable to the terms and mode as may be directed by the Government, and we indulge the hope and confidence that our Government will do all they possibly can to assist in our perilous situation.

JOHN ARCHER,
JOSEPH ADAMS,
Assessors."

The descendants of John Archer have a right to a thrill of pride in such a masterly letter as this. The soldier and the man of action is here revealed, but there is more than that. Such a letter could be written only by a man of high culture. Familiarity with Latin is evident from some of the expressions used.

There is, moreover, in the author's possession the original manuscript of John Archer's application for a pension written in his own hand April 15, 1818. The penmanship is wonderful. The spelling, even judged by the standards of our own day, is almost without flaw. Its style is worthy of the best traditions of the English universities, in one of which he was undoubtedly trained.

Its closing paragraph reads as follows:

Should the foregoing be thought worthy of a claim on the National Bounty of last March it will alleviate the necessities of one who is sixty seven years old and has had the numerous family of twenty one children whereof fifteen are living (six dead) viz: eleven sons and four daughters, all married and gone but two sons, minors,²³ living with me and I am in needy and low circumstances at this time.

The third son of John and Elizabeth (Tupper) Archer was John Archer, Jr. Like his father he was prominent in town affairs. When but twenty-three years of age John Archer, Jr., was selected as one of a committee of three to secure the incorporation of the town of Cherryfield. This task was successfully accomplished.

John Archer, Jr., married Lucy Colson who is said to have been a member of the household of General David Cobb. Their daughter, Julia Ann, married Samuel Dunn, Jr., and became the mother of Clark Dunn, who married Melissa Williams, and of Direxa Dunn, who married Asa Williams. Their son, Samuel Colson Archer, born December 25, 1819, married Harriet Williams in 1849. The eldest son of this couple was John S. Archer, who married Frances Martha Williams. The mother of Frances was Marilla M. Spooner, who brought to the Williams family another strong colonial strain of ancestry as will be seen from the following:

Spooner Ancestry

The history of the Spooner family has been written by Thomas Spooner under title of "William Spooner of Plymouth," but unfortunately only the first volume was ever printed. In this volume, however, it is possible to trace the direct line from William Spooner to Leonard Spooner, the father of Marilla. The line is as follows:

1. WILLIAM SPOONER, born —; died March, 1684; came to Plymouth in 1637; married (1) Elizabeth Partridge, died April 28, 1648; married (2) Hannah (Pratt), supposed to have been a daughter of Joshua and Bathsheba Pratt. Joshua came to America in 1623 and was one of the thirty-six purchasers of Dartmouth, Mass.
2. SAMUEL SPOONER, second child of William and Hannah, born January 14, 1655; died 1739. He married Experience Wing (daughter of Daniel (died 1698) and Anna (Ewer) Wing), born August 4, 1668. Daniel came from England with his parents and settled at Sandwich, Mass.
3. DANIEL, fourth child of Samuel and Experience, born February 28, 1694; died 1797. Daniel went from Dartmouth to Newport, R. I., and became a freeman of colony May, 1732; moved to Petersham, Mass., prior to April, 1749. He married Elizabeth (Ruggles) October 10, 1728. She was a daughter of John and Hannah Ruggles and was born October 21, 1710; died August, 1767.

²³ David Cobb Archer, born September 6, 1802, and George H. Archer, born March, 1904.

4. WING SPOONER, sixth child of Daniel and Elizabeth, born December 29, 1738; died December 7, 1810; was a captain in the Revolutionary War; was in the battle of White Plains and other engagements. He married January 27, 1763, Eunice Stevens (daughter of Joseph Stevens), born August 31, 1746; died August, 1838.
5. STEVENS, first child of Captain Wing and Eunice, born August 17, 1763; died August 17, 1827. Stevens enlisted in his father's company; was in the battle of Bennington August 16, 1777; married July 2, 1787, Sally Hodgkins (daughter of John and Rebecca (Rice) Hodgkins), born —; died July 4, 1841. Soon after marrying he removed to Sangerville, Me.
6. LEONARD, fourth child of Stevens and Sally, born September 10, 1798. No further mention in Vol. I, "Descendants of William Spooner," but our family record shows that Leonard Spooner married Mary Parsons February 5, 1827. Children:
 - (a) John P. Spooner, born January 12, 1828; married Jane H. Wakefield April 2, 1856.
